

The 2012 Khmer syllabi can be downloaded here:

<http://seassikhmer2012.blogspot.com/2012/03/seassi-khmer-2012-course-syllabi.html>

You can also see how the entire summer's worth of assignments looks by going through my class blog from last year:

<http://seassikhmer2011.blogspot.com/>

More information and examples from the modular Khmer system at SEASSI can be found here:

<http://www.seassi.wisc.edu/heritage/khmer/about.html>

...and finally, here are detailed speaking proficiency guidelines I developed for Khmer, which make specific reference to what native-speakers and non-native speakers are expected to learn at various points in the program:

<http://www.studykhmer.com/videos/khmerLLF.html>